Applying Understanding by Design

Here's what participants say:

"I liked that I could use my curriculum to create performance tasks to give my students a deeper understanding of their learning."

"I enjoyed how interactive it was and getting to talk to my peers to share ideas and learn from one other. Great information!"

"I will be able to create my own essential questions now!"

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description Have you heard the expression "Start with the End in Mind?" Understanding by Design is a systematic approach that will help you do that with your lesson design!

Participants will learn how to use CA standards and learning targets to develop essential questions to frame meaningful learning for students. With the frame in place, participants will consider the skills, knowledge, and procedures that students will need to meet the learning targets, as well as approaches to assessing student learning.

Building Conceptual Understanding and Promoting Academic Discourse in Math

Here's What Participants Say:

"Now I want to implement counting collections in my kindergarten class!"

"They gave us time to plan and explore materials. I loved the breakout room discussions!"

"This workshop helped me think critically about what is essential in math instruction."

Audience LAUSD TK-5 Teachers

Description Do your students sometimes struggle to really "get" math?

This workshop will guide participants in the use of Cognitively Guided Instruction, a systematic approach to teach students how to work with complex math questions and to communicate their understanding with each other as they build conceptual understanding in mathematics.

Participants will engage in learning how to teach Math Routines, Problem Solving, and Counting Collections in an equitable classroom environment. By the end of the workshop, each participant will develop resources to take directly back to their classroom.

Building Literacy Skills to Tackle SBA ELA Performance Tasks

Here's what participants say:

"I liked the strategies and how we practiced doing them."

"There was lots of information I can use to help prep my students."

"I liked being able to explore aspects of the SBA through CAASP - it provided a lot of great resources that I can use for my students."

"Interactive, very informative and practical!"

Audience LAUSD Grades 6-12 Teachers

Description Are you looking for ways to make sure your students are ready for the Smarter Balanced Assessment ELA Performance Task?

Designed for teachers of Grades 6-12, this collaborative workshop will help participants unlock the requirements of SBA ELA Performance Task and develop lessons that target critical literacy skills and standards.

Using released Smarter Balanced Assessment materials as an anchor, participants will explore and practice strategies like Thought Prompts, Three Reads Protocol, and the Do-What Chart – approaches to help students extend and organize their thinking about the text they read. Participants will have time to reflect on how they can incorporate the strategies in their classrooms, and to share their thinking with others.

Classroom Management: Establishing Clear Expectations

Here's what participants say:

"I like how we were given scenarios of a realistic classroom rather than an ideal, textbook-like, classroom."

"The strategies shared are appropriate and were provided with examples of how they may roll out in the classroom."

"As a new teacher I got a lot of new strategies to implement in the classroom."

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description At its foundation, classroom management is about having clear expectations and communicating them effectively to your students – students learn best when they know what to do and how to do it.

This workshop provides research-based strategies to manage student behavior through structured positive behavior support system. With these techniques in your teacher toolkit, you'll be able to maintain a rigorous learning environment that is physically, intellectually, and emotionally safe.

Deepening Academic Conversations

Here's what participants say:

"I enjoyed the learning opportunities with other teachers in breakout rooms, and the activities we can have our students engage in for academic conversations."

"This workshop uses real life examples in the classroom. I definitely want to go over conversation norms the first week back at school!"

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description Conversations allow us to build ideas, solve problems, and communicate our thoughts – all 21st Century skills that prepare students for college and career.

In this workshop, learn research-based instructional strategies to improve the quality of student academic discourse in your classroom:

- Teach students to converse in academic ways.
- Weave conversations into the things they already do in your classroom.
- Help students be more aware of how they think and to clearly express their thought processes to others, in pairs, small groups, and whole-class settings.
- Use conversations to assess student knowledge, skills, and engagement.

Grouping Students for Productive Learning

Here's What Participants Say:

"I like how they explained a strategy and used an example of how its done and the research that supports the strategy."

"What I enjoyed most was the different groups I was placed in and the resources shared which made the session engaging!"

"I enjoyed working in breakout rooms to experience what my students will experience in this learning process."

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description More heads are better than one! When students work together in effective groups, they learn more about the content as well as the thinking of others and themselves. In this workshop, participants will expand their knowledge of productive student groups, including:

- the use of students' skills, knowledge, language proficiency, and even personality to form productive groups
- student grouping structures to foster interactions and cognitive engagement
- brain-based instructional strategies

Join us to learn how purposeful student groups will help you address the 4 C's of 21st century skills (communication, collaboration, critical thinking, and creativity) and support students in developing social emotional learning (self-awareness, self-management, social awareness, relationship skills, and responsible decision-making.)

How to Unleash Your Students' Inner Motivation

Audience LAUSD UTK-12 Teachers

Description Have you ever wished your students would be more motivated?

Schools and classrooms often use reward systems such as certificates, parties, bucks and apps to motivate students to do well in school. Research has shown that although these systems may change student behavior in the short-term, they don't foster the inner motivation that inspires our students to deeply connect with their own learning.

In this workshop, participants will 1) learn what intrinsic motivation looks like, 2) explore six high impact approaches to foster motivation in the classroom, and 3) learn instructional strategies that will bring out the inner motivation that all our students possess.

Informational Text Structure & Project Based Instruction

Here's what participants say:

"I enjoyed the opportunity to work on our own PBL, while bouncing ideas off colleagues and presenters."

"I liked learning about what project basing learning is and how important it is to teach text structures to students."

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description Reading and writing are essential skills across all content areas. This workshop will provide strategies to support diverse student populations in their development as proficient readers and writers of informational text. Participants will explore effective pedagogy for teaching informational text structures and facilitating effective student use of these structures in their own writing. This workshop will develop participants' knowledge of pedagogy to implement project based instruction, supporting the Common Core Standards' call for authentic writing that is appropriate to task, purpose, and audience.

Integrating ELD in Every Subject

Here's What Participants Say:

"I liked all the examples and tools to support students."

"I appreciated the strategies to implement ELD in every subject and the correlation with UDL."

"The content was relevant to what we need in our classes."

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description All of our students deserve an education that includes learning in every subject, but relying on the textbook isn't enough - we need to build inclusive classrooms that address the language and literacy needs of our English Learners.

Our workshop will provide an array of research-based practices that help students acquire the academic English to unlock and accelerate their learning, as well as the time to discuss these practices with other classroom teachers. Together, we will explore ideas such as Universal Design for Learning (UDL), academic language, discussion guidelines, and a variety of language strategies to bring learning to life!

Math Practices

that Develop Critical Thinkers and Confident Problem Solvers

Here's what participants say:

"I learned a lot of fun and hands-on activities for teaching math. "

"I liked that we were able to actually try the games and other math activities/strategies ourselves! Really helpful when thinking about bringing them back to the classroom. "

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description Using the 8 Mathematical Practice Standards as a guide, we have collected activities and games that support students in their development as Critical Thinkers and Confident Problem Solvers.

Explore some of the mindset roadblocks that prevent students from excelling at math and then play along and problem solve like your students will. Discover the power of games and hands-on learning in mathematics instruction.

Organizing and Delivering Instruction With Schoology

Here's what participants say:

- "I liked learning about all of the many features about Schoology. There is so much to learn!"
- "All the links on 'how to' were very practical and essential to making my Schoology page more interactive and student and parent friendly!"
- "I really enjoyed the opportunity to discuss strategies with my colleagues and share best practices."

Audience LAUSD K-12 Teachers

Description Technology allows teachers to engage students in learning in new and exciting ways. But how can we keep all the resources we find and assessment tools we develop organized and ready to go?

This workshop will help you master the fundamentals of the Schoology learning management system to effectively organize and design instruction. Together, we'll use the kinds of activities and products you want your students to engage to explore Schoology techniques that will ensure that your students will know where to find and do it all.

Picture Books to Start SEL Conversations

Here's what participants say:

"The CASEL competencies and focus areas are very helpful for planning and preparation."

"I appreciated being given the time in breakout rooms to really analyze different picture books and discuss how we could use them in our classrooms."

"I am looking forward to imbedding this throughout the instructional day!"

Audience LAUSD Pre K-12 Teachers

Description In this changing world, teachers are required to focus on more than typical academics. What is good Social Emotional instruction? How can we become proficient in helping our students be more inclusive and develop better friendships within our classrooms and the community? How can we insert anti-bias instruction into our daily content?

In this workshop, participants will explore relevant picture books and techniques to help expand social emotional instruction in the classroom. Teachers will have opportunities to access book lists and to work in groups to create lessons using literature as a platform for increasing their understanding of their own Social Emotional Learning (SEL) Skills. We will be modelling meaningful conversations with peers that enhance our understanding of self and community in addition to managing behaviors and cultivating successful relationships.

Teacher and Student Connections: Building Positive Relationships with Students

Here's what participants say:

"I loved the opportunity to collaborate with other teachers and share strategies."

"The presenters offered a variety of resources - links, videos, articles, and activities!"

"I like that this course was practical in how we have a lesson to take back to the classroom on Monday morning!"

Audience K-12 LAUSD Teachers

Description Ready to bond with your students but could use some "tried and true" strategies that really work? This is the workshop for you!

Forging connections takes intentional effort and determination but the rewards are worth it all! When students feel connected with their teacher and their peers, they feel supported in the classroom and are more likely to engage in learning and have fewer behavioral problems.

Included in the module are specific strategies and resources that take you from being the stranger on a screen to facilitator of learning along with other fun and meaningful adventures that build and grow strong positive relationships between you and your students.

Using Graphic Organizers to Support the Writing Process

Here's what participants say:

"I loved using the organizers and think/pair/share with oral practice."

"I liked that we were able to experience the lesson we could implement with our students!"

Audience

LAUSD K-5 Teachers

Description

Is your students' writing disorganized and unstructured? Or do they have difficulty getting their ideas down on paper? Then this is the class for you! Start with a review of some of the best graphic organizers to use for the writing process. Participate in a model lesson to experience, first hand, how to develop a narrative writing piece using graphic organizers. And finally, see how technology can support your effort to build better writers. When you leave this class, you will be ready to go back to your classroom and reinvigorate your writing program with tricks and tips and hands on experience with apps to help you and your students organize, give and get feedback, and publish writing products in creative ways.
